LIVE STOCK IN BIG FIRE

Thirty-three Head Saved
From a Burning Stock
Barn.

YOUNG MAN INJURED

While Heroically Battling
With the Flames Monday Night.

The stock barn on the farm of Atkins & Ellis, on the Newstead pike, a large frame building, was burned Monday night about eight o'clock. It is not known how the fire originated.

There were 33 horses and mules in the barn, but all were saved by hard work, though two of them were considerably burned.

Riley Atkins was painfully burned about the head and face in getting the stock out of the burning building.

The building contained ten tons of hay, some corn and a quantity of gearing, all of which was lost. The loss was $2,000, with $1,000 insurance.

NEXT PRESIDENT TALKS TO 20,000

Biggest Ovation Ever Given Any Man In Kentucky, When Bryan Spoke at Louisville Tuesday Night.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 21.—At the lowest estimate, twenty thousand people heard William Jennings Bryan speak at Phoenix Hill Park last night, and had there been space for them ten thousand more would have availed themselves of the opportunity of hearing the Democratic nominee for President. Both Mr. Bryan and James Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago, who also addressed part of the audience, declared it to be the most magnificent aggregation of people they had ever appeared before. Not only was the assembly immense in numbers, but its enthusiasm could neither be fathomed nor measured.

SPEAKS FOR AN HOUR.

Mr. Bryan spoke for an hour exactly in the main hall, and dwelt at length on the main issues of the campaign. He emphasized the tariff and guaranteed bank deposit issues. He openly charged the Republican

The annual meeting of the Presbyterian Missionary Union was held at the Westminster church Tuesday evening and yesterday. Rev. John C. A feature of the meetings yesterday was a reception by the ladies of the church to the visiting delegates.

P. WAT HARDIN

Will Tell The Democrats All
About the Coming Victory.

Gen. P. Wat Hardin will speak at the court house in this city at 1:30 p. m. Saturday Oct. 24, and there should be a big crowd to hear this popular and able leader.

Gen. Hardin has been a hard worker in the Democratic ranks for many years and has not lost any of his vigor. He is an original Bryan man and will explain the issues of the day in a manner that cannot fail to make an impression even on the Republicans.

This is the last speech of the campaign here, by a Democrat of state prominence.

A large crowd is expected at the court house and there will be a Democratic love feast in honor of the old war horse's visit to the city.

THE COUNCIL

Lets Pavement Contracts and Discusses Finances.

The city council held an adjourned session Monday night to discuss some pavement contracts and other street matters. Bids for about one-mile of four-foot pavements in the Fifth ward were opened. One square on Greenville street to be of concrete was let to Gus H. Moore at 131 cents. All of the rest was let to the Meacham Contracting Co. for 123 cents for stone curbing and brick, unless the property owner prefers concrete at 15 cents. The property owners have the privilege any time before the work is begun to make their own arrangements and stop court costs. The contractors are to be paid in apportionment warrants, which operate as a preferred lien on the lots.

A new broom for the city sweeper was ordered and the street committee was given permission to use hot water from the ice factory for sprinkling purposes during the drouth.

An executive session was held at which finances were discussed.

VICTIMS OF A FIENDISH MOB

Prominent Attorneys Murdered By Tennessee Night Riders.

$10000 REWARD OFFERED

Quinton Rankin and R. Z. Taylor Killed at Reelfoot Lake.

Union City, Tenn., Oct. 20.—In revenge for their activity in connection with the Reelfoot Lake section, Tennessee, a few miles south of Hickman, Ky., R. Z. Taylor and Quinton Rankin, prominent attorneys of Trenton, Tenn., were murdered last night by night riders near Reelfoot Lake. The body of Taylor has not been found and there is a faint possibility that he may have escaped. Captain Quinton Rankin's body was found early this morning.

HANGED AND SHOT.

Capt. Rankin and Col. Taylor were taken from the hotel of P. C. Ward at Walnut Log, Tenn., at an early hour this morning. Capt. Rankin was strung up to a tree and his body was riddled with bullets; the body of Col. Taylor cannot be located, but it is believed that he met a fate similar to that of Capt. Rankin. Capt. Rankin and Col. Taylor went to Walnut Log yesterday afternoon on legal business connected with the West Tennessee Land Company.

Both the victims are attorneys for the West Tennessee Land Company, which owns the ferry and fishing and hunting privileges around Reelfoot Lake, and incurred the hostility of night riders by its monopoly. Last spring the hotel and other buildings of the company were burned by night riders after sending repeated warnings. Recently, it is said, P. C. Ward, manager of the properties, was whipped.

PROSECUTED NIGHT RIDERS.

The attorneys represented the company in recent prosecutions for night riding. Yesterday they arrived at Reelfoot Lake about 4 o'clock, but apparently news of their coming had preceded them. There were several persons at Ward's hotel when the night riders called. The night riders outnumbered the men in the house, who were completely surprised. The two victims had no chance to defend themselves.

Col. Taylor and Capt. Rankin thought things had quieted down and did not fear trouble when they went to Walnut Log yesterday. A band of men quickly formed, went to the house of El Powell, a farmer, and forced him to precede them to LIFE SAVING DEVICES.

Advances Made in Apparatus For Shooting Life Lines.

Consent John L. Griffith of Liverpool reports that the advisory subcommittee appointed by the British government to formulate a report upon the question of British ships carrying life line throwing apparatus conducted some most important experiments in Liverpool recently, the results of which are now being considered.

The apparatus submitted comprised kites, buoys and different styles of guns and rockets. The first tests were those of West's drift line-throwing, followed by the much improved Reuzek box kite. It was the opinion of those who witnessed the experiments that the kite is a successful invention and will be very serviceable when the wind is blowing on a lee shore. One of the most interesting of the tests was made with a balloon constructed of gold beater's skin in two parts. It carried a line for 1,500 yards. The principal tests, however, were made with rockets, cannon and shoulder guns, which have been carried to a high state of perfection. Much interest was shown in the results of these tests, both by the committee and the nautical experts.

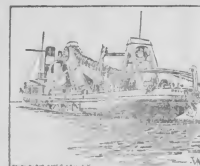

The cannon threw a line a distance of 310 fathoms, which indicates the standard of efficiency to which it has been brought. A projectile is inserted in the cannon, and the cannon is fired by means of a friction tube which propels the projectile a certain distance, and from that point a rocket is discharged which carries the line to its destination. The gun is portable and easily handled. Another interesting feature is that during the daytime the smoke indicates the direction in which the line is carried, while at night the fire of the rocket denotes the direction. For shore use this gun can be placed on a small handbarrow, and, as there are no elaborate accessories, it can be readily worked by any person of ordinary intelligence. This gun is claimed to be the most satisfactory apparatus for heavy work, as, for example, from the deck of large liners—Consular Report.

HUGE BUCKET DREDGER.

Largest Vessel of its Kind Used to Deepen Suez Canal.

In connection with the widening and deepening of the Suez canal at Port Said the authorities have recently increased their dredging fleet by a new vessel, which ranks as the largest bucket dredger afloat. This vessel, which is named the Peluse, was built on the Clyde and has been acquired for service in the Port Said roads, which are being deepened.

The Peluse has a deck length of 305 feet, with a molded breadth of thirty-seven feet and molded depth of twenty-seven feet two inches. The deck is steel throughout, sheathed with teak, and there is a mile fore and aft. Propulsion is effected by means of independent twin screw engines indicating 1,800 horsepower, with a separate dredging engine of 400 horsepower. The latter machinery is of the three crank type placed on the main frame.

LARGEST DREDGER Afloat.

log. She is supplied with three ballast tanks each of fifteen feet diameter by ten feet seven and one-half inches in length.

A feature of the vessel is that all gearings has machine cut teeth. The auxiliary machinery throughout is operated by hydraulic power. Separate condensing plant is fitted for all machinery. The Lohmütz patent hopper door arrangements are used.

The dredger has been designed to work between the limits of twenty feet and fifty feet below water level, owing to her large draught she is navigated from the Clyde to Port Said in working condition, being of seagoing design in the widest sense of the term.

Man's Electrical Resistance.
Experiments have shown that the human body between the feet and the hands has an average electrical resistance of about 5,000 ohms when the hands and the feet are wet and from 10,000 to 20,000 ohms when hands and feet are practically dry. With the last resistance a one two-hundredth ampere current will pass through the body if the hand completes a 100 volt circuit through the earth. In the commonly used alternating current of 100 volts and 50 cycles per second there may be difficulty in letting go of the wire, and such a circuit of 500 volts is very dangerous, especially if traveling vital organs.

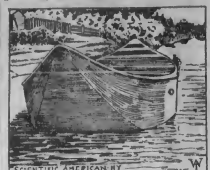

Danger From Springs.
In the summer, when so many thousands drink from tempting springs in the woods and on hill-sides, a warning recently given by E. A. Martel, the celebrated French explorer of caverns, should not go unnoticed. Contrary to a widely prevalent opinion, M. Martel says that springs of apparently pure water are in many cases merely the outflow of surface waters which have disappeared through fissures, carrying with them pollution from the soil and not purified in their passage through the rocks. He thinks that even chills are not an effective filter for surface water passing through it.

RE-ENFORCED CONCRETE.

Material Proves a Success in Construction of Boats.

The utilization of re-enforced concrete as a constructional material for various purposes for which masonry, wood or iron have been previously employed has undergone considerable development during the past few years. One of the most novel applications of the system, however, is that which has been evolved and perfected by a well known Italian engineer, Signor Carlo Gabellini of Rome—namely, the adoption for the construction of boats and floating structures in general, such as pontoons, floating bridges, and so forth.

The system of construction is very simple. The keel is in the usual manner, the iron rod re-enforcement being anchored to the armor of the former and being brought up the sides of the hull in conformity with the desired lines of the craft. The iron rod generally used has a diameter of about four-tenths of an inch. Expanded metal which has a mesh of about two-tenths inch is stretched between the vertical supports, to which it is attached by suitable metal clips. The concrete is then applied to the skeleton fabric in layers inside and outside, equally, the thickness of this sheathing varying according to the dimensions of the craft.

The system has been utilized for the peculiarly shaped boats which serve to support the decks of the quaint floating bridges to be found on the river Po. Hitherto wooden boats have been strung across the waterway, the deck planking, built in sections, being laid transversely across them. The boats are of peculiar design, having sharp pointed rising ends. In such re-enforced concrete the same general lines are preserved, only the ends are made blunter, a greater midship beam is provided, while they have perfectly flat bottoms, forming a kind of pontoon. Each boat is forty-five feet in length, with a beam of twelve feet and a depth of 3.6 feet. So satisfactory have the results been in service, the absence of repairs being a pre-eminent distinguishing feature, that the wooden boats for these quaint floating bridges are being superseded by the re-enforced concrete craft as rapidly as possible, over a hundred having already been built for this service.

LOCAL ANAESTHESIA.

German Scientist Devises New Method For Operations.

Professor Bier, the distinguished south German who succeeded the late Professor von Bergmann at the head of the surgical faculty of the University of Berlin, has devised a new and remarkable anaesthetic treatment for use in operations upon the extremities of the human body. By the application of this treatment, which is described as a venous transfusion, surgeons who have hitherto used ether or chloroform will no longer need to administer general anaesthesia for the purpose of rendering the patient unconscious, but will be enabled to work in a perfectly bloodless and painless area, while the mind and the rest of the patient's body remain an entirely normal state.

The professor employs for his venous transfusion a very weak solution of cocaine. It is designed, of course, particularly for operations upon the extremities of persons who cannot stand a general anaesthetic. The cocaine slowly finds its way into all the veins of the affected area, which has previously been blocked off by tight bands above and below, and the operation proceeds in a region totally freed from blood and pain—without the slightest effect on any other portion of the patient's system.

To avoid the dangers of cocaine intoxication by reason of even this weak solution spreading into other veins after the removal of the operating bandages, Professor Bier washes out the veins within the operating area with a physiological salt solution before removing the bandages.

How Tin Foil is Made.
Tin foil, which is used extensively for wrapping tobacco, certain food products and other articles of commerce, is a combination of lead with a thin coating of tin on each side.

It is made in the following manner: First a tin pipe is made of a thickness proportioned to the thickness of the foil to be made. This pipe is then filled with molten lead and rolled or beaten to the extreme thinness required. In this process the tin coating spreads simultaneously with the spreading of the lead, and continuously maintains a thin, even coating of tin on each side of the center sheet of lead, even though it may be reduced to a thickness of a thousandth of an inch or less.

Mathematicians' Opportunity.
M. Paul Wolfskehl, professor of mathematics at Darmstadt, has instituted a prize of $25,000 as an inducement to rediscover the famous theorem of Fermat, which has been lost for over two centuries. It was Fermat who first applied algebra to geometry, and it was of him the author declared that he knew many things of which we are ignorant in fact, in many things he was in advance of his successors.

Hospitals For Trees.

"The trees of Paris will delight you," said the traveled man who was seeing off his friend. "Every boulevard and avenue has its two lines of trees. Sheltered from the hot sun, you walk under them in a cool green shade. That hot and dusty city doesn't really keep its trees vigorous and fresh. It must have tree hospitals—great nurseries where, with all sorts of liquid parasite killers and all sorts of stimulating fertilizers, the random urban trees are built up again. Continually in Paris you see faded trees being taken up and fresh trees being put down, and fresh and faded trees alike, in those embankments which we call transplanters, drive continually up and down the sunny streets."

Shingles are now made under a patented process from asbestos fiber and Portland cement. The Russians may make a mistake in putting a skull and crossbones label on bottles of vodka. (CONTINUED.)

All was quiet. No wisp of smoke curled from the cabin chimney, no work was forward, for Harry had climbed far up the mountain, alone with his thoughts. It was a favorable opportunity.

Jessica held the fatal draft in her hand as she ran quickly down the wall and across the cleared space to the cabin door. It was wide open. Peering warily, she saw that both rooms were empty, and, with a guilty last glance about her, she entered. A sail in the wall held an old violin, and beneath it was a shelf of books. She took one from the lower row and opened it curiously. It was "David Copperfield," and she saw with kindling interest that heavy lines were drawn along certain of the pages. She looked about her. Where should she put the draft? He had left a mark in the book. He would open it again no doubt. She laid the draft between the printed leaves, beyond the market. Then, replacing the volume on the shelf, she ran from the door and hastened back up the steep trail to the knob.

Leaning back against the warm rock, lapped in the serene peacefulness of the spot, Jessica fell into reverie. Never since her wedding day had she said to herself boldly "I love him"—never till yesterday. Now all was changed. Her thought was a tremulous assurance: "I shall stay here near him day after day, watching. Some day his memory will come back, and then my love will comfort him. The town will forget it has hated and will come to honor him. Some time, seeing how he is changed, his father will forgive him and take him back, and we shall all three go home to the white house in the avenue. If not, then my place will still be with Hugh. Perhaps we shall live here. Perhaps a cabin like that will be home, and I shall live with him and work with him and care for him."

Thus she dreamed—a new day dream, untraced by the sordid tests of verity.

So absorbed was she that she did not hear a step approaching over the springy moss, a sharply broken breath as the intruder stifled an exclamation. She had drawn her handkerchief across her eyes against the dancing glimmer of sunlight. Suddenly it dropped to her lap, and she half turned.

In an instant of surprise, as Harry's lock flashed into her, a name sprang unbidden to her lips—a name as white as his, standing far away that I have known. It was mistaken. I was crazy to think that you—

He stopped. A wave of sympathy passed over her. She felt a mad wish to throw all aside, to cry to him: "You did know me! You loved me once! I am Jessica—I am your wife!" So intense was her emotion that it seemed to her as if she had spoken his name again audibly, but her lips had not moved, and the tap of a woodpecker on a nearby trunk sounded with harsh distinctness.

"I have wanted to speak to you," she said after an instant in which she struggled for self control. "You did a brave thing yesterday—a splendid thing. It saved me from sorrow all my life!"

He put aside her thanks with a gesture. "You saved me also. You found me ill and suffering, and your horse carried me to my cabin."

"I want to tell you," she went on, "that I have never forgotten you. I know about your past life—what you have forgotten. I know you have put it all behind you."

His face changed swiftly. Today the determination with which he had striven to put from his mind the problem of his clouded past had broken down. In the light of the charge which had been flung in his teeth the afternoon before, his imagination had dwelt intently on it.

"You know," he said hoarsely. "Yet you say that! They stoned me in the street the day I came back. Yesterday they counted me a thief. It is like a hideous nightmare that I can't wake from."

from. Who am I? Where did I come from? I dare not ask for fear of further shame! Can you imagine what that meant?

She came close to him and touched his arm.

"I know all that you suffer," she said. "You are doing the strong thing, the brave thing! The man in you is not astray now."

It was lost, but it has found its way back. When your memory comes you will see that it is fate that has been leading you. There was nothing in your past that cannot be buried and forgotten. What you have been you will never be again. I saw you fight Devil, and I know why you did it. I heard you play the violin. Whatever has been, I have faith in you now."

She spoke breathlessly, in very abandon, carried away by her feeling. As she spoke he had turned toward her, his pale face flushed, his eyes leaping up like hungry fires, devouring her face. She stopped abruptly and took a startled step from him.

He turned from her instantly. His hands dropped at his sides. The words that had almost sprung to speech had slipped back into the void.

"I thank you for the charity you have for me," he said, "which I have no desert. I—I shall always remember it."

She hesitated an instant, made as if to speak. Then, turning, she went quickly from him. At the edge of the bushes she stopped with a sudden impulse. She looked at the handkerchief she held. Some tiny lettering was embossed in its corner, the words "Jessica." She glanced behind her.

He had not moved. Rolling it into a ball, she threw it back over the bushes, then ran on swiftly through the trees.

After a time Harry turned slowly, his shoulders lifting in a deep despair. The white and filmy cambric caught his eye lying at the base of the great knobby rock. He went to it, picked it up and looked at it closely.

"Jessica!" he whispered. The name clung about him. The very leaves repeated it as if while she spoke that very name had half caught in the air, some certain recede of his thought. He pressed the handkerchief to his face. The faint perfume it exhaled, the very name of desire, gave him a ghastly impression of the familiar. He struck his forehead sharply with his open palm.

"Foot!" he said, with a bitter laugh. "Foot!"

Chapter 20

YET the sanitarium on the ridge slope had descended. On its broad grounds there was no light of moon or stars, and its chamber windows were dark save where here and there the soft glow of a night lamp sifted through a shutter. The evening had closed gloomily, breeding storm.

Before Jessica extinguished the light she searched in a drawer and found her wedding ring—the one she had worn for less than an hour. When she crept into bed the ring was on her finger. She had fallen asleep with her cheek resting on it.

She awoke with a start, with a vague, inexplicable uneasiness, an instinct that the night had voiced an unusual sound. She sat up in her bed, staring into the dark depths of the room. Her instant thought had been of David Stires, but the tiny bell on the wall whose wire led to his bedroom was not vibrating. She listened a moment, but there was only a deep silence. Slipping out of bed, she crossed before the tall French window, the room was on the ground floor and the window gave directly on the lawn.

White she gazed there came a sudden yellow flare of lightning, and far distant mutter of thunder spoke behind the hills.

Still, with the unreasoning uneasiness holding her, she groped to the door, drew the bolt and looked out into the wide, softly carpeted hall, lighted dimly by a lamp set just at the turn of the staircase. At all once a shiver ran through her. There, a dozen steps away, the light full moon, stood the man who filled her thoughts.

He stood perfectly still, without movement or gesture, gazing at her.

He stood perfectly still.

She could see his face distinctly, although on the pearl gray wall. It wore an expression of strained concern and of deep consciousness. The instant agitation and surprise blotted the puzzle of his presence there. She forgot that it was the dead of night; that she was in her nightgown. It dashed across her mind that some near and desperate trouble had befallen him. All the protective and maternal in her love welled up. She went quickly toward him.

He did not move or stir, and then she realized that, though his eyes seemed to look at her, it was with a passive, trance-like fixity. They saw nothing. He was asleep.

She hated, a deep compassion and a painful wonderment holding her, feeling with a thrill the power she possessed over him. Then, like a cold wave, surged over her a numbing sense of his position. How had he entered? Had he broken locks like a burglar? The situation was anomalous. What should she do? Waked abruptly, the result might be disastrous. Discovers his presence there when all alone, suspected as he had been, would be ruinous. She must get him away, out of the house, and quickly.

A breath of cool air swept past her, putting out the lamp in the outer door was open. At the same instant she heard steps beyond the curve of the hall. Dr. Brent's voice peremptory and inquiring. Her nerves chilled. He blocked the sole avenue of retreat. No, there was one other, and only one—a single way to shield him. Quiet and resourceful now, though her cheeks were hot, she took the hand of the unconscious man, drew him silent and unresisting into the friendly shadow of her room, closed the door noiselessly and bolted it.

For a moment she stood motionless, her heart beating violently. Had he been seen? Or had the open door created an alarm? Releasing his hand gently, she found her way softly to a stand, lighted a tiny night taper and threw a shawl about her. A sudden confusion tingled through her veins, a sense of maidenly shame, opposing the sweet reminder of their relationship—was he not in fact her husband?—that lay ever beneath her thought to justify and explain.

Suddenly, in the tense silence of the room, the mantel clock struck 3 in deep chime, like the vibration of a sacred church bell. The tone was not loud—indeed, the low roll of the thunder had been well nigh as loud—but there was in the intrusive music cadence a peculiar suggestion to the dormant mind. It penetrated the crust of sleep. It touched the inner ear of the conscious intelligence. Harry started, in shadow ran through his frame, he averted dizzily, his hand went to his forehead.

In the instant of shocked awakening Jessica was at his side in an agony of apprehension, her arm thrown about him, her hand pressed across his lips, her lips at his ear in an agonized warning.

"Hush! Do not speak! It is I, Jessica! Make no noise!"

She felt her wrist caught in a grasp that made her wince. His whole body was trembling violently. "Jessica!" he said in a painfully articulated whisper. "You? Where am I?"

"This is my room," she breathed. "You have been walking in your sleep. Make no sound. We shall be heard."

A low exclamation broke from his lips. He looked bewilderedly about him, his eyes returning to her face with a horrified realization. "I came here—to your room?" The voice was scarcely audible.

"It was I who brought you here. You were in the hall. You would have been found. The house is roused."

He turned abruptly to the door, but she caught his arm. "What are you going to do? You will be seen!"

"So much the better. It will be at my proper measure—as a prowler, a housebreaker, a disturber of honest sleep."

"No, no," she protested in a panic. "You shall not. I will not have you taken for what you are. I know that. But they would not know. No one must see you leave this room. Do you not think of me?"

He paused, gazing at her where she stood in the half light, a misty, uncertain figure. She was curiously happy. The delicious and pangless sense of guilt, however—the guilt of the hidden, not the blame-worthy thing—that was tingling through her was for him a shrinking and acute self reproach.

She was silent. "Forgive me," he said. "If you can, I—I can never forgive myself. How can I best go?"

For answer she moved to the window, slender and writhlike. He followed silently. As she parted the curtain a second of bright lightning revealed the landscape, the dark hedges and clustered trees. It blackened, and she drew him back, with a hushed word, pointing where a lantern was flashing through the shrubbery.

"It is a watchman," she said. "He will be gone presently."

"God help me!" he whispered, the pent passion of his dreams rushing to utterance. "Why did I ever see your face? I was reckless and careless then. I had dimmed the decent side of me that now is quivering alive. I have tried to blot your face from my memory, but it is useless. I shall always see it."

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only. They cure sick kidneys. They cure backache, every kidney ail. Here is Hopkinsville evidence to prove it.

Mrs. W. C. Davis, 829 West Seventh St., Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "Mr. Davis has never had an occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1903. For years prior to that time he had been an almost constant sufferer from kidney trouble. He had intense pains in his back and shoulders that annoyed him all day and prevented him from sleeping during the night. The relief he obtained from Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Thomas & Trahern's, now L. A. Johnson & Co.'s drug store was surprising and gratifying. They seemed to act differently than anything he had ever tried and the fact that he has never had a recurrence of the trouble since gives him the highest opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills."

FOR KENTUCKY—Partly cloudy and continued warm Thursday.

Wonder if the tobacco night riders will justify the crimes of the fish night riders at Reelfoot Lake?

Gov. Patterson is displaying considerable energy in prosecuting the Ohio county night riders and Judge Jones seems to be all right.

Hon. J. S. Wortham, of Leitchfield, formerly State Senator and one of the most prominent Democratic leaders of the Fourth district, died Sunday, of typhoid fever, aged 39 years. He left a family.

Let every Democrat who is not registered in Hopkinsville avail himself of the opportunity offered to those with a legal excuse next week. A Democratic tidal wave is sweeping the country and Hopkinsville Democrats should take part in the victory to be achieved.

Walter Wellman's letters are doing more to encourage Democrats than any other information in the press. Republican as he is, and writing to a Republican paper, he tells things as he finds them. He says Ohio will give 10,000 and Indiana 30,000 for Bryan and that New York is the real battleground, with Taft in the lead by a very close margin.

SUPPLEMENTAL

Registration Will Be Held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday are supplemental days for absentees from the city on Oct. 6 and for those who were kept from the polls by the illness of themselves or members of their families. The county clerk will register the names of such legal voters as make affidavits up to 9 o'clock Wednesday night. The registration is very full and probably not more than 100 such voters are unregistered.

Death at Asylum.

Annie C. Faulkner died at the asylum Monday night. She was 65 years old and had been in the institution quite a while. The body was sent to Kevil, Ky., for interment.

Lost Pocket Book.

Mrs. L. F. Burris, who resides a few miles east of the city, on last Saturday lost a pocket book containing several dollars in silver and a check from the asylum steward to Mrs. M. E. Hayes.

The first meeting of creditors will be held at Madisonville Oct. 31 before W. L. Gordon, referee in bankruptcy. Mr. McGrew has been engaged in business for about two years at the corner of Clay street and First Avenue. He is a competent machinist and a hard working young man and his friends hope to see him in a position to resume business.

GOV. TO SPEAK IN TRIGG CO.

Decides to Make Three Addresses in First Congressional Districts.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 20.—Just to show the people in the heart of the night rider district that the Governor of Kentucky is one of the most amiable men alive and that he has neither horns, hoofs nor tail, Augustus E. Willson has decided to make three speeches in the First district, beginning at Cadiz. He had to change some dates to make the towns, but he declared that he would yield to the importunities of his friends and the curiosity of his enemies and speak in Trigg, Calloway and Hickman counties, which have been ravaged by the torch and Winchester of the night marauders. On Tuesday, October 27, Gov. Willson will reach Cadiz, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon he will speak to what will undoubtedly be one of the greatest crowds ever gathered in Kentucky. The papers of that section have abused the Governor more than any in the State, and the feeling of the people is supposed to be one of enmity.

WILL TALK FACTS.

It is Mr. Willson's intention to show them by argument and some facts which he has heretofore kept concealed that in sending the soldiery and finally suppressing the insurrections by night he has done the State the greatest service in the power of the Administration and made peace at least in the district between the Tennessee and the Cumberland rivers.

"The people in this section," said the Governor in making his decision, "are of the same fine stuff that composes the Kentucky population in the Bluegrass, and they have allowed themselves to be maligned without justice. I am going there and tell them the conditions as I found them and the reason why I have acted with the martial spirit attributed to me."

NIGHT RIDERS CONDEMNED.

Whether or not the Governor will talk plainly of the night riders is a matter of conjecture, but it is remembered that he did not fail to do so in Hopkinsville, when, in December, 1907, was raided and pillaged by the marauders.

Following his Cadiz speech, Gov. Willson will go at once to Murray, where, on Wednesday morning, Oct. 23, he will address the people of Calloway county, and those of many other divisions who will undoubtedly come to hear him.

That night he will speak at Fulton, near the scene of the massacre of the Dava Walker negro family by night riders some weeks ago.

November Wedding.

A marriage license was issued Monday to Charlie Sharber and Miss Lena Waggoner. The wedding is scheduled to take place Sunday, November 1.

Duval-White.

Howard R. Duval and Miss Annie Pearl White were married at the home of the bride on the Greenville road Tuesday.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

To Storage Warehousemen and Prizers For Planters' Association.

Notice is hereby given to all who desire contracts to conduct storage or prizing houses to make application for same, by or before the time of the next meeting of the county committee, which is Nov. 2.

Please make application in writing and send to Secretary M. B. King or to the undersigned.

I wish to take this opportunity of saying a few words in regard to the clause which will be in the prizers' contract, viz: that no prizing house shall be allowed to receive tobacco on the stalk. The object of this clause is obvious, that is to induce the farmer to prepare his tobacco at home for the prizer. And the reason for it is clear to every thinking man, viz: that it is believed the farmer can and will classify and prepare his tobacco at home better than the prizing man can, crowded and overrun as he becomes with tobacco on the stalk. I believe also the farmer will be more careful as to the order of his tobacco.

Plainly then the motive of the board of directors is entirely honest and directed to the good of those whom they represent.

It has been intimated that some prizers may attempt to get around this clause by having, as a side issue a stripping house, in another name it may be, or he will allow his farmer friends to bring their tobacco to his stripping house and do their own stripping, etc. I wish right here and now to give notice to all prizers and storage men that any such subterfuge, or indeed any instrumentality on their part to defeat, not the letter of this clause, but its obvious purpose, shall be taken as sufficient evidence by me that they are not entitled to a contract for another year, and I shall use my utmost endeavor to prevent them from getting one, and I am convinced the entire county committee is of the same opinion.

Pointnville, Pa., Feb. 16, 1908.
S. B. Hartman, M.D.
Dear Sir: I have been thinking of writing to you for some time to let you know what Peruna did for me.
I am 67 years old. I lost my health about six or seven years ago. I first had dyspepsia and employed different doctors.
Last year I injured one of my kidneys. I had one of the best doctors for that. He put me to bed, not to move for two weeks.
I slowly recovered, but was so weak and prostrated that I could walk but a short distance. In fact I had to keep quiet.
I took several remedies, but obtained no relief. I also had catarrh in some form.
My wife advised me to take Peruna, and it was with pleasure that I can say that by taking one and one-half bottle of your Peruna, I cured me and I feel all right. I send this with many thanks to you, as I enjoy life again.
My wife has also been taking your Peruna for asthma and it helps to relieve her. We keep your Peruna in the house constantly. Again I say I thank you for Peruna.
Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Pointnville, Pa., Nov. 8, 1908.
S. B. Hartman, M.D.
Dear Sir: I have good health now and your valuable medicine gave me good health. I have had no doctor for some time, as I do not need any. When I take cold I take Peruna and in a short time I am all right. My wife is subject to asthma. She takes Peruna at that time, and she has had no need for a doctor for some time. With many thanks for your medicine, we remain,
Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Pointnville, Pa., April 16, 1906.
Dr. S. B. Hartman,
Dear Sir: We have Peruna in the house all the time and when we think we need it, we take it. We are about sixty years old and have not called a doctor to our place for some years.
We go out in all kinds of weather and sometimes when we go on a trip we take Peruna along. A preventive is better than a cure. That has been our experience.
I had poor health some years ago and when I found your medicine I hit the right thing. We both thank you for your good medicine.
Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

1. John Donnelly, Mayor of Doylestown, Pa., have been acquainted with Mr. Philip Kratz for 25 years. I know him to be an honorable and useful citizen. He, in my presence, signed the above statements concerning Peruna, which I have every reason to believe are true in all particulars.

VICTIMS OF A FIENDISH MOB.

the hotel where the attorneys were registered. P. C. Ward, manager of the hotel, was then called from bed and the night riders made him lead them to the room occupied by Capt. Rankin and Col. Taylor. Waking the attorneys, the marauders forced them to dress and then quietly marched them from the hotel.
RANKIN LYNCHED.
The attorneys were led about 300 yards to a ravine near Reelfoot Lake. Here the night riders gave them an opportunity to save their necks by promising to release them if their demands concerning the fishing rights in Reelfoot Lake were acceded to. Both Capt. Rankin and Col. Taylor refused to give in.

"Then if you won't give in we will kill you," was the reply.
The rope was then tied about the neck of Capt. Rankin. A man climbed an ash tree and Capt. Rankin was raised from the ground while the end of the rope was tied to a limb. As the attorney swung out into the air members of the mob opened fire with shotguns. Capt. Rankin's side and arms were riddled by the bullets and the back of his head was blown off.

TAYLOR DISAPPEARS.
The mob then untied Capt. Rankin and left him lying dead upon the ground. Nothing has been seen of Col. Taylor since he was taken into the ravine.

Ed Powell, who hauls fish from "The Log" to Hickman, was forced to accompany the mob to the ravine. Powell, Col. Taylor, Capt. Rankin and the surveyor, whose name is unknown, were taken with the mob.
TAYLOR MAKES DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Powell states, it is said, that after killing Rankin, a vote was taken regarding the disposition to be made of Taylor. During the dispute Taylor made a dash and jumped into the bayou, starting to swim across it. A number of shots were fired at him and in the confusion Powell slipped away and brought back the story of the escape or attempted escape of Taylor.

Searchers found the trees on the edge of the bayou clipped by bullets and there were deep footprints in the mud along the shore. On the other side of the bayou there was a single footprint.

Parties of from fifty to one hundred persons searched throughout the day, but were unable to find a trace of his body. It was at first reported that he had been released by the mob after he had been frightened into submitting to the demands of the night riders when he saw Capt. Rankin hung. This theory has not, however, been entirely abandoned. Bullet holes have been discovered in trees at another place than where Capt. Rankin was hung. This is near the water in the ravine and it is feared that Col. Taylor was shot to death.

RANKIN'S BODY BROUGHT BACK.
The body of Capt. Rankin was brought into Union City at 8:30 o'clock to-night and a large crowd of men collected about the hack which carried the corpse. Two of the party which had searched for the body of Col. Taylor in the ravine gave details of the killing to excited men hungry for any news of the tragedy. The searching party brought in the news that the people were pouring in from all parts of West Tennessee to take a hand in looking for the body of Col. Taylor and ferreting out the murderers. A big party of men is on the way to Walnut Log from Clayton and another from Humboldt and still another from Tiptonville. Sheriff Eastwood, of Obion county, in which the murders occurred, is at the scene of the crime with a posse. Sheriff Haynes, of Lake county on the other side of Reelfoot Lake, is on his way to the

BABY'S ITCH EASILY CURED

Infantile Eczema Quickly Relieved by External Use of Wintergreen Compound.

Infantile eczema, which has baffled the skill of the best physicians for so many years, at last seems to be curable with great ease.

Results of the last two years indicate conclusively that baby's itch, infantile eczema and other skin diseases of children can be very simply cured by the application of a compound composed of oil of wintergreen, thymol and glycerine, as in B. B. B. Prescription.

The Rev. Lewis Steeley, of Weatherly, Pa., writes:

"Our baby boy's little face was so dreadfully covered with eczema that blood and water ran from the sores nearly all the time. After using 34 bottles of D. D. D. Prescription we are so happy to tell you he is entirely cured and the disease has never broken out again. If this letter is in any way a help to other sufferers, you may publish it."

If you have a child which is suffering with this terrible itch, we are sure you will not neglect one hour to give your baby the right kind of relief. We have seen too often how quickly the remedy mentioned above takes the itch away at once and how all the cure seems to be permanent; we have seen this too often to hesitate at all in recommending the remedy for your children.

scene with another posse.

RIDERS WELL ORGANIZED.

The night riders, it is said, have a band that will stand or fall together. The citizens' posse and the two sheriff's posses are also determined, and it is expected that if the night riders are cornered a pitched battle will be fought.

Trenton, the home of the two murdered men, is much aroused. As soon as word of the killing was received there a big posse of men was formed, but it was decided to wait until arrests were made before moving to the scene of the crime. No one has as yet been arrested on suspicion.
Gov. Patterson, whose wife is a native of Union City, has offered a reward of $10,000 for the apprehension of the murderers of the attorneys.

One hundred Nashville soldiers under Capt. W. C. Tatum have been sent to Reelfoot Lake. Gov. Patterson will go in person to the scene. Judge Joseph E. Jones has called a special session of court at Union City, which is in his circuit. He announces that he will have the grand jury empaneled at once and will have the court organized immediately.

Some Things Worth Remembering

When in need of anything in the Jewelry or Optical line, get it from the OLD RELIABLE, then there will be no question as to the article being just what it is represented to be and as cheap as the same quality can be bought for anywhere; only one price to all, rich and poor, old and young; and you have the assurance from an exclusively practical jeweler who has been in the business in Hopkinsville a quarter of a century and who does not misrepresent his goods either in price or quality. Hundreds of articles bought from M. D. Kelly over thirty years ago are to be seen today in use, and are the best evidence of the quality of goods sold by the old reliable. These are considerations that should not be forgotten.

When Lady Betty Held the Candle.

By ORMOND GREY.

Copyright, 1914, by Jessie Morgan.

"Jeffry," said my uncle when he caught me sulking and demanded an explanation, "all women are good at heart, but all women are abominably uncertain. They will go their own way, whether we like it or not, and perform what we must put up with their whimsies and make the best of it. If your cousin Betty is capricious, give her to understand that you would rather have her that way than not. Then she will no longer have any desire to keep your head whirling."

This was one day after Lady Betty had trifled with my love and dignity, and I had gone to Sir Hugh Livingston, the dearest of relatives and the best of patrons, to declare that I should at once sail away for Spain and offer my sword as a soldier of fortune. I would depart within a week, and as for Lady Betty, she might marry whom she pleased or die a spinster.

"I think myself that the fly has romped long enough," continued Sir Hugh as he laid a kindly hand on my shoulder, "and that the halter should now be slipped over her head. How to do it, Jeffry—how to do it? Indeed, let us plan."

And plan we did. Four days after our planning the Lady Betty set out for the country seat of the Marchioness of Littleton, alone and distant, there to tarry for the space of two weeks. Naturally her maid accompanied her, and besides the coachman and footman there were two armed and mounted servants to prevent the knights of the road from coming too close.

Sir Hugh and myself were to follow on horseback two days later, or so it was understood. Scarcely had we waved the coach out of sight when the good man pinched my ear in playful way and said:

"The plan worketh thus far without hitch or suspicion. The adventures of the night will give thee a bride within a month. Jeffry, the capricious fly is tamed!"

At 3 o'clock that afternoon, when the coach had reached Featherstone, hardly more than half the journey, the capricious Lady Betty decided to remain there for the night. At sundown she decided to push on to the White Hart Inn, two leagues farther, saying it would be romantic to ride beneath the stars of the summer night.

Her great coach had rolled out of the courtyard. The last league had been entered upon, and the night had become fairly dark when an uproar suddenly occurred. That uproar should have been caused by two pretended highwaymen hired for the occasion, and the guards should have fired a shot or two at them and then fled, as per orders, but, alas, for our well laid plans against the maid!

Our hired variety of their way and did not appear in time, and the two that did come forward were genuine members of the profession. Our two merry thieves were to abduct the Lady Betty and her jewel box and hang on to them until meeting me on some distant road, and I was then to drive them away in short order with pistol and rapier and rescue the damsel all for my own.

In her gratitude and admiration, how could she say any when I asked that the marriage day he named and that there should be no more of her?

Fate ordained that my horse should cast a shoe and that I should be an hour late at the rescue, and even then I was to learn that the coach, Betty, suspecting my plans and determined to balk them, had actually remained behind at Featherstone and sent only her maid forward to the coach. Sir Hugh and I had planned according to military tactics, but a simple maid and brought our endeavors to naught.

The weather had changed, and the rain was pouring down, and yet I must ride back to Featherstone and secure corroboration of the maid's story before I could feel at ease. Back I rode to be told that when the coach left the inn Lady Betty had taken to horse to complete her journey by another road.

If she had accomplished this without adventure, then I would have been a butt of ridicule indeed. Fate was waiting to play her a shabby trick, however.

The highwaymen who had stopped the coach on the east road had galloped away to the west by a crossroads, and as she reached this in her ride she fell into their hands. A hut in the woods, in which they were making a temporary home, was close at hand, and thither they conducted the frightened and trembling maiden, to shut her up in the back room while they set down in the front one to eat, drink and make merry over their plunder.

Flowing my way over the execrable roads amid the downpour, my eye suddenly caught the twinkling of a light in the forest, and I dismounted and approached on foot. Through the open windows I heard the talk of men. Passing to the rear of the hut, I drew myself up to a window opening and softly called to know if any one was there.

"Thank heaven, 'tis thee, Jeffry!" came the voice of the Lady Betty in prompt response. "I am in the hands of highwaymen and almost dead with fright. Hast thou sword and pistol with thee, dear boy?"

"In truth I have, but as you have not asserted that the former is but a toy and the latter a danger for a youth to experiment with, I know not how such arms can aid you in this emergency."

"Nay, nay, Jeffry, I may have spoken slightly, but it was only the way of a willful maid. However, if thou hast taken it too much at heart, or if thou doubtest thy courage or skill!"

Then I was beside her, and my arm around her. It was well that I had not remained longer outside. Of a sudden the men in the front room rose up and came out the door between us, one of them having a dagger in his hand, and at the sight of them the girl moaned and covered her face with her hands.

The ruffians started for a moment and then drew pistol from their belts. The three of us pulled triggers together, but our powder was damp and there was no explosion. Then one sprang back and possessed himself of their swords, and next moment I was fighting the pair of them.

I gave to look back on that hour. The game to my sweetheart gave me would have put heart into a coward. She stooped and lifted up her head and backed into a corner and held it during all the fight. I took the corner opposite, brave of heart, and then the blades began to sing.

The ruffians were bold and lusty and no bunglers with the steel, but within two minutes I knew that I was master despite the odds. Sometimes the white hand of the candle was steady enough, and our three blades caught the flame and sent it back a hundred times over, and again it wavered about and sent shadows across our faces as we cut and thrust, parried and retreated.

By and by I flashed my rapier into the shoulder of one and the hip of the other, and then I came down and out. Then Lady Betty wavered her way through the open door and fell into a chair at the table and sobbed in a hysterical way. I had the cunning robbers get up and limp away to be hanged elsewhere, and when I had seen to their going I stood beside the fearful maid and said:

"Dear one, doth it not strike thee that we have been overlong a-wooing?"

"Dear me, but I have never given it a thought!" she replied as she raised her head and dried her tears all in a moment.

"Wilt marry me a month hence, sweetheart?"

"Thou too ridiculous!"

"Or wilt thou wait here until I ride back for a coach and thy maid and wish thee a pleasant journey?"

"Jeffry," she said after a startled look around, "thou art a determined and persistent young man."

"Within a month, dear one! Speak quickly, for the rain hath ceased and the moon is shining like face, and if I am to set out for Featherstone!"

"I shall set out, too," she said as she let me take her hand. "Wherever thou goest I shall follow and be with thee."

And the capricious Lady Betty was won at last.

A Rash Conclusion.

"Thou art to understand that this is your final answer, Miss Stubbles?"

"My final answer."

"Nothing can move you?"

"Nothing."

"Then my life will be a lonely one and my fate a harsh one, for my uncle with whom I lived has just died and left me—"

"That fact somewhat alters the case, Henry. I cannot be harsh to one who has sustained such recent bereavement. If I could believe that you are sincere!"

"Sincerest! Oh, Miss Stubbles!"

"You have certainly made an impression on my heart. Give me time to think of it."

"How long?"

"After all, why think of it? Henry, I am yours!"

"Oh, Genevieve!"

"Do not squeeze me so hard, Henry. Your poor uncle! Was he long ill?"

"Three days."

"It is too bad. You say he left you?"

"Yes; he has left me."

"How much?"

"How much? I said he had left me. He had nothing else to leave. I am alone in the world now, homeless, penniless, but with you by my side—why, she's fainting!"—London Mail.

A Bit of Home.

One is always glad to see a familiar face on foreign soil. Hardly less welcome is the sight of some object associated with one's native country. Some people never discover their patriotism until they catch sight of their flag in a strange land. Mr. Samuel Cox found a bit of the United States in Russia and took about it in "The Echo."

While visiting Peterhof we were rowed out to a fairy island on the lake. Then the guide took us to an oak about thirty feet high. On it was a brass plate, declaring the fact that the tree grew from an acorn taken from an oak by George Washington's grave and sent to the Emperor Nicholas. The tree was well grown and thrifty.

It was curious to see how the name Washington was spelled in Russian. I do not know the Russian type, but this is the nearest approach to it I can make:

Вашингтон.

I asked the guide to spell and pronounce it, and he said:

"Va-shin-ge-ton-a!"

His Day Day.

THE FIRST LETTER A Woman Writes.

THE FIRST LETTER that a sick woman should write or have some one write for her is to Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., asking him if his FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION is suitable for her case, and he will frankly tell her so if he thinks it is. He may have to ask some questions before he can be sure just what the trouble is.

If you are suffering from uterine disease, the symptoms of which are headache, backache, edema, pain in various parts of the body, especially in the pelvic region, bearing-down, inflammation, ulceration, then Dr. Pierce will advise you to use his "Favorite Prescription" for he has had a wonderful experience in the use of this remedy. It is not a "patent medicine" but it is a "natural" prescription that became his "favorite" when he was engaged in private practice forty years ago and found that it cured more than ninety-eight out of every hundred of all such cases that came under his care.

The doctor found scores and hundreds of women who were being improperly treated because their troubles were not understood, and he determined to place this remedy that he had used so successfully within reach of the multitudes who were in such need of it. He made it efficient, agreeable to taste, and, best of all, safe for any woman, old or young, to use. It is a vegetable tonic, and invigorating, composed of native roots of remarkable medicinal virtue in the treatment of this class of cases, and a mixture of others of more than half a million of cases entitles it to full confidence.

The one medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, the ingredients of which are pure and potent, and which every body having the great laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It stands alone not only in its ingredients being known, but also as the only specific advised remedy for women's diseases which absolutely contains no alcohol.

DWELLING WITH NO WOOD.

New Residences at Bogota, N. J., to contain Nothing Burnable.

A dwelling that is quite unlike any other in the vicinity of Bogota, N. J., is now in course of construction. It has no wood about it—nothing that can burn. Even the beams for the old English ceiling are of masonry. Ernest A. Gibbons, a manufacturer of Jersey City, is the owner. It is built on the plan of a country house on Walnut Tree Farm, a country estate near his birthplace in England, but the house at Bogota is made of other materials than wood.

Terra cotta forms the body of the building. It is in the form of hollow blocks, of the same kind used in the skyscrapers of New York City, for floors and for covering the steel frames. In the walls of Mr. Gibbons' home the blocks are laid end to end, so that the hollow spaces form continuous chambers running up and down. Tests proved that the bearing strength was as great as that of solid brick walls. The air spaces inside the walls render conductors of heat and moisture, with the result that the house will be warm in winter, cool in summer and dry all the time.

In the floors the blocks are laid between concrete beams. The beams extend downward, giving in appearance the same effects as the wooden beams in the homes on the Walnut Tree Farm. They are covered with smooth cement. All the partitions are of hollow tile, like the outside walls, so that a fire could not spread from one room to another. The roof is of green tiles.

The main entrance to the house is upon a small courtyard almost invisible to passersby. On the main street is a garden, two or three acres in extent, inclosed by a wall. Altogether the ground covers four acres, and there is a tennis court in one corner. The house has three stories, in addition to the basement, and contains fourteen rooms. The cost is estimated at $12,000.

AERIAL GARAGE ON HOTEL TOP

Brilliant Manor, N. Y., to Have Great Station For Airships.

In expectation of the near solution of aerial navigation and in preparation for the time when that sport will become as popular as motoring the management of a hotel at Brilliant Manor, N. Y., is having plans prepared for the erection of an immense airship receiving and dispatching platform on the roof of the hotel.

The details are being worked out by a Philadelphia architect who designed the hotel. An addition is being planned also, and it is upon this addition that the airship station will be built. Work upon the building will be rushed to completion in order to have it ready for occupancy by next spring.

The platform, which will cover the entire roof and extend several feet beyond, will be given up exclusively to the uses of aviators. The only exception to this will be the entrance to the elevators, which will enable guests to go direct from their flying machines to the other parts of the hotel.

Extending the entire 350 feet length of the building and several feet beyond on trestlework will be a starting track upon the proper slope. At one side will be enormous barns in which several airships may be stored overnight. The plans also call for a completely equipped repair shop.

One of the most difficult problems which confronted the architect when he started work upon the unique plans was how to provide for receiving flying machines by night. This he finally solved by a special lighting arrangement by shaded lights which cannot confuse the operator. Another strong beam of light will be thrown from a shaded parabolic reflector directly upward to guide distant aviators to the place.

Plants on Florida Keys.

The plant kingdom to do a great deal on the lower Florida Keys. Parties are beginning to cultivate the plant on a small scale, and if it can be made a success there as it is in the Latin quarters, where the plant should altogether cease, for we have hundreds of little islands that are well adapted to the growth of this valuable plant, says the Homeowner. Vanilla, capsaicin, castor bean and new tropical fruits are also being introduced on the central keys at Ocean City. An exquisite mango, rich as peaches and as free from fiber as any custard, is also being experimented with and promises wonderful results.

Necrology: Palmistry's Rival.

Palmistry has a rival in the new fortune telling science, necrology, which has been of late winning converts in Paris. An elderly lady recently set up in the Latin quarters, where she reads careers in the noses presented to her. She is doing a flourishing business. Everybody has a nose, and this new method of life examination appeals to the credulous. The old lady looks long and carefully at her visitor's nose through a microscope, and she finds better indications in the marks and lumps than ever she found before in the lines of the hand.

Big Fence Building.

The forest service is preparing to send engineers to the Pinhead Indian reservation in Montana to build a fence around the 12,800 acres of land included in the new national range for the fast disappearing bison. The land has not been paid for yet, and it is estimated that $30,000 will be spent in making settlements with the Indians and others who now own the land, and $10,000 will be spent on the fence. The American Bison society will raise funds for the purchase of the animals.

BIBLE STUDY CONTINUES

Four Services Being Held
Daily At The Baptist Church.

DR. JENKENS ACCEPTS.

Conference Will Go On Until After Next Sunday,
Oct. 25.

Tuesday there were no less than six sermons at the Baptist Bible Conference. The first was at 6 a.m. by Rev. J. C. Masse, the church being well filled.

At 10 o'clock Dr. R. V. Miller preached on "The Second Coming of Christ" and was followed by Dr. W. A. Nelson with another of his series of sermons on "The Holy Spirit."

In the afternoon Rev. J. S. Rodgers preached at 3 o'clock and Dr. Miller again at 4 o'clock. Dr. Masse conducted the evening service. The attendance was good at all of the meetings and at night the crowd was very large.

Dr. Jenkins, the pastor, is discouraging the wearing of hats by the ladies, especially at night, and very few of them fail to leave their headgear at home.

One of the best meetings of the conference was Dr. W. D. Powell's Mission's sermon Monday night. He spoke of the fertile field for State mission work in the mountains, but said there were sections in the western portion of the state where sin and lawlessness could only be controlled by the spread of religious teaching.

Yesterday the schedule of meetings was about the same. Dr. Masse in the early morning and at 4 p.m. Dr. Miller and Dr. Nelson in the forenoon and Dr. Masse and Dr. Rodgers in the afternoon.

The conference will continue until after Sunday.

Dr. Masse preached his last sermons yesterday.

Dr. Jenkins to Leave.
Dr. M. A. Jenkins has definitely decided to leave his church here and accept the call to Athens, Ga. The change will be made about Dec. 1st. There is profound and universal regret here that Dr. Jenkins is to surrender his work here at a time when it has apparently but just begun.

PREACHER IN JAIL

Former Kentucky Pastor Is Under Serious Charge.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 19.—H. E. Roseberry, formerly pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Sardis, Ky. was arrested here today and lodged in jail. Two weeks ago Roseberry came to Chattanooga and company with a 16-year-old girl. They have since lived together as man and wife.

Today H. P. Mastin, of Wilmore, Ky., came to Chattanooga and caused the arrest of Roseberry. Mastin says the girl is his sister, and that Roseberry left his wife at Wilmore and eloped with the girl.

Roseberry is charged with violating the age of consent law.

CHARLIE NASH

Popular Hopkinsville Boy
Wins Tennessee Bride.

Mr. Charles Harris Nash, Jr., of Temple, Texas, and Miss Lizzie Lou Alexander, of Middleton, Tenn., were married last evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. C. H. Alexander, at six o'clock. They left soon afterwards for their home at Temple, Tex., where Mr. Nash is in business. The groom was reared in this city but removed to Texas about two years ago. His pretty bride was until last June a teacher in Bethel Female College. She is a young woman of beauty, unusual in intellectual endowments and many accomplishments. Mr. Nash is to be congratulated upon winning so charming a bride.

HERE'S A FRIEND OF SCHOOLBOYS

Gives Strong Judicial Opinion
Against Whipping Children.

RELIC OF BARBARISM.

Says Castigation of School
Boys Is Assault and Battery.

New Castle, Ky., Oct. 21.—Judge William Carroll, for the past two terms the presiding judge of the Twelfth judicial district, and widely known as an able lawyer, will publish the following statement this week, taking the ground that corporal punishment may not be legally administered in the common schools. His opinion being correct, the castigation of pupils by teachers, though much in vogue, is nothing else than assault and battery. Judge Carroll's card is as follows:

"The teacher of a Kentucky common school has not the right to inflict corporal punishment.

"Where the common law is in force, unchanged by statute, the husband may whip the wife, provided the rod be no thicker than his thumb, and the master may beat his servant moderately.

"Civilization and humanity have co-operated in the abolishment of such relics of barbarism, and now the husband or master is forbidden by law to lay hand upon the servant or wife in aught but kindness.

"It is right that the parent be permitted to moderately chastise his child; devoted parental or maternal love that will sacrifice life, liberty and fortune in the protection of offspring may be safely trusted to govern the relation of parent and child.

"Flogging has been abolished as to wife and servant, soldier and sailor, and is not permitted even in the penitentiary.

"The authority vested in the teacher is found in Section 4506, Kentucky Statutes. Under that statute the teacher may hold each pupil accountable for his conduct in school or upon the playground at recess, and may, if necessary, suspend, but nowhere in the statute law can be found authority for striking a pupil.

"Spare the rod and spoil the child."—Solomon.

"Let little children come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."—Christ.

"An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."—Moses.

"Love them that hate you."—Christ.

"Let a woman sin let her be stoned."—Moses.

"Let him who is without fault cast the first stone."—Christ.

"Judaism and Christianity, Barbarism and Civilization!"

"The slave driver's whip, the 'cat o'nine tails' in the army and navy, the brutal husband's stick 'no thicker than his thumb,' the scourge in the penitentiary and the teacher's rattan switch, are all denounced by the law as unlawful and brutal, and are replaced by modes of correction that do not disgrace the pupil or brutalize the teacher.

"The teacher who cannot maintain discipline by means other than the whip should change his occupation to rule-driving."

"The writer has lived more than his allotted three score and ten, has governed children from the teacher's desk and by a parent's love, and therefore knows whereof he writes."

Thieves Enter Drug Store
Through Coal Cellar.

Martin & Boyd's drug store was entered by thieves Monday night, who gained ingress by way of the grating of the coal cellar, which enabled them to go up into the store room, which is in Hotel Latham. They obtained about $50 from the cash drawers under the counters. The police are working on the case.
